

on 12 April 2012. Because that motion was not on the correct form, the court directed petitioner to return the correct, completed form, which he did on 24 April 2012.

Because petitioner's plea agreement contains a post-conviction rights waiver, the court first examines whether that waiver is valid. "[A] criminal defendant may waive his right to attack his conviction and sentence collaterally, so long as the waiver is knowing and voluntary." United States v. Lemaster, 403 F.3d 216, 220 (4th Cir. 2005). Petitioner suggests nothing irregular about his plea. At petitioner's plea hearing, the court found that petitioner had entered into the plea agreement freely and voluntarily. There is no ground for altering that determination, and the court will enforce petitioner's waiver of post-conviction rights contained within the plea agreement.

Having so found, the court must determine whether petitioner's claims are within the scope of the waiver. See Henderson v. United States, Nos. 5:05-CR-163-FL, 5:08-CV-319-FL, 2009 WL 1578578, at *2 (E.D.N.C. June 4, 2009). Petitioner asserts two separate claims, which essentially constitute one claim, that is, the court lacked jurisdiction to enhance his sentence based on the possession of a firearm.¹ (See Pet., DE # 32, at 4, 5 & Attach., DE # 32-1, at 3-5.) This claim, not being one based on ineffective assistance of counsel nor prosecutorial misconduct not known to petitioner at the time of his plea, falls within the scope of the post-conviction challenges waiver.² Petitioner is not entitled to relief.

¹Pursuant to U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1(b)(1), petitioner's offense level under the sentencing guidelines was increased two levels for his possession of a firearm in connection with the instant offense.

²The court recognizes that subject matter jurisdiction cannot be waived. United States v. Griffin, 303 U.S. 226, 229 (1938). However, the claim petitioner asserts does not truly concern the court's subject matter jurisdiction. Cf. United States v. Cassell, 38 F. App'x 156, 157 (4th Cir. 2002) (unpublished) (finding that the defendant's appeal waiver barred his right to challenge the issue of the district court's subject matter jurisdiction to enhance his sentence to account for the number of firearms involved under U.S.S.G. § 2K2.1(b)(1)(E)).

The § 2255 petition is DISMISSED. The court finds that petitioner has not made “a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right.” 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). Pursuant to Rule 11(a) of the Rules Governing Section 2255 Proceedings, a certificate of appealability is DENIED.
